Our Company

At Cuppabrew, we're more than just a tea shop, we're a space dedicated to mental well-being. Specialising in a curated selection of herbal teas known for their calming, uplifting, and restorative benefits, we aim to create a sense of balance in the fast-paced, lives of Generation Z.

End Goal

Our end goal is to be more than just a tea shop—we aim to become a cultural hub where tradition meets innovation. By bringing people together over the universal ritual of tea, we hope to cultivate a community that values well-being, diversity, and sustainability. From ethically sourced ingredients to environmentally friendly packaging, we're dedicated to doing business in a way that's mindful of the planet and its people.

TARGET AUDIENCE

Gen z

Psychographic: This audience values authenticity, sustainability, and experiences over material goods. They often seek community-focused spaces that align with their values.

Demographic: Gen Z consumers, a distinct group aged 18-24, are characterised by their health-consciousness, tech-savviness, and social awareness.

Gen Z, a younger generation, is more focused on health, wellness, electronics, and technology than prior generations. They are inherently tied to these areas, and marketing efforts should focus on them to increase conversion rates. Gen Z focuses inwardly, striving to become their best version. Utilising their interests in electronics, technology, and social media can help businesses reach their target audience effectively. It's important to emphasise this and target them effectively.

Business Model

- Sustainability
- Subscription
- Source of revenue
- Use of fairtrade

SUSTAINABILITY

Organic and Fair-Trade Teas: Partner with suppliers that offer certified organic and fair-trade teas. This ensures that farmers are paid fairly, supporting ethical and environmentally friendly practices. Also, the tea industry is currently facing a large amount of sustainability challenges. These come in the form of deforestation and water scarcity. Furthermore, when you pair this with the fact that 92% of consumers say that sustainability is key when choosing a brand, sustainability becomes a must. This is why we choose to donate a sum of our proceedings back to the workers in fairtrade to show our appreciation and awareness to their current situation.

Coffee vs tea

As of 2023, coffee consumption in the UK has overtaken tea in a very convincing fashion. Coffee sales are now nearly double that of tea, with 533 million packs of coffee sold compared to 287 million packs of tea over the past year. In terms of regular consumption, 59% of Britons regularly drink tea, but 63% drink coffee, to the tune of around 95 million cups a day.

As a group, this would be an interesting market to try and close. But after some discussion, we decided it would have to be a larger company as opposed to a small business

UK shoppers could face tea shortages due to trade route disruptions

Sainsbury's tells consumers there are problems that could affect the availability of black tea

End of traditional tea shops?

ChatGPT

Tea shops face several challenges, including:

1. Competing with Coffee Culture

Coffee is more popular, especially among younger audiences, making it hard for tea shops to attract regular customers.

2. Seasonal Demand Fluctuations

Tea sales often dip during hot weather, unlike iced coffee, which maintains year-round popularity.

3. Customer Awareness and Education

Many people are unaware of the health benefits and variety of teas. Educating customers about specialty teas can be challenging.

4. Limited Market Perception

Tea is often seen as a niche or occasional drink, not a daily necessity like coffee, limiting frequent purchases.

5. Menu Complexity

Offering a wide variety of teas can overwhelm customers, especially those unfamiliar with different blends and brewing styles.
